Introduction

Situated in picturesque Thrybergh Park, spanning over a hundred acres, Thrybergh Hall has been welcoming guests for over 200 years. The main entrance to the Grade II listed property is found down a half mile stretch of private tree lined driveway. It's hard to believe that you are in such close proximity of the four metropolitan boroughs of South Yorkshire making it the perfect place for a wide variety of events and private functions.

As you enter the grand rib-vaulted entrance hall with cantilevered imperial stairs to the rear accompanied with iron balustrade, you cannot help but notice the ornate plaster cornices. The floor plan lends itself nicely to create larger spaces using the interconnecting doors. All have Wi-Fi access enabling connectivity for all your needs. Rooms on the ground floor consist of the Jack Hulley Suite, Fullerton Room and the 19th Bar whilst the Boardroom is situated upstairs.

History

The name Thrybergh is believed to have its roots in the Anglo-Saxon period, but no substantial explanation can be given as to its exact origin. In the Domesday Book it is referred to as Triberga. It can be concluded from early records that a 'Lord of the Manor' existed at Thrybergh at the time of the Saxon King Edward the Confessor (1004-1066) and one can imagine a small, self-supporting community clustered round the manor house and the church which lay within sixty yards of each other.

After the conquest in 1066, the successful Normans abolished the existing network of landowners and lords and the Thrybergh estate passed to William de Perci. The Perci's held the seat until about 1200 when it passed to the Normanvilles. Adam de Normanville, who is known to have been living at Thrybergh in 1279 died without issues and the estate passed to his sister who had married Ralph de Reresby.

The following 400 years saw an unbroken succession of 16 generations of Reresbys occupying Thrybergh. The estate passed relatively briefly to the Saville-Finch family between 1706 and 1809 but then as was often common, passed to a relative due to a childless marriage. That is how the estate came into the Fullerton family, with whom the estate is most closely associated today.

After almost a hundred years The 'Old Hall' needed extensive repair and was becoming quite unsafe to live in. An estimate showed that it would be more costly to repair than it would be to build a new house. Consequently, in 1811, an architect was commissioned, a new site chosen on the estate, and work began, which was to result in the distinguished Gothic style mansion we know today. The 'Old Hall' was demolished and no visible evidence of its existence now remains.

The Fullerton family took possession of the new Hall in 1813/14. This is what we refer to as Thrybergh Hall today. Regarded as being among the most beautiful mansions in the area, it afforded spacious accommodation: four main reception rooms, twenty-two bedrooms, ancillary rooms, and servants' quarters. Col. John Skipworth Herbert Fullerton was the last of the family to live at Thrybergh, leaving in 1896 to take up residence at Noblethorpe Hall and the estate opened as a Golf Club on April 23rd, 1903.

Jack Hulley Suite

Named after one of the club's past presidents, the Jack Hulley Suite is the main function room available for hire at Thrybergh Hall. It is a spacious suite and the largest room available at our venue with direct access to the outdoor patio. The layout of the function room can be configured in different ways to accommodate various events, including weddings, corporate events, and private parties.

The Jack Hulley Suite offers excellent views of the golf course, making it an ideal setting for any event. The room has direct access to the main bar, ensuring that guests have easy access to refreshments throughout their event as well as access to the outdoor patio which offers a wonderful spot to enjoy fresh air and scenic views.

Fullerton Room

Named after the family who built Thrybergh Hall, the Fullerton Room can be configured in various ways to suit your requirements.

The Fullerton Room at 51 square metres is perfect for civil ceremonies and private dining experiences. The room is also ideal for hosting a wide range of events, including meetings, seminars, training sessions, and small-scale celebrations. Whether you need a boardroom-style setup or a classroom-style layout, our team can configure the Fullerton Room to meet your needs, with the option of a portable TV for meetings and functions if required.

The room also lends itself well to hosting private dining experiences and smaller wedding ceremonies.

Fullerton Room

The 19th

The 19th at our venue is a traditional bar that offers a comfortable and relaxing atmosphere for guests to enjoy.

The bar features soft, comfortable seating with tables, providing a cosy and welcoming environment for socialising or simply unwinding after a round of golf. Our popular and spacious bar is a favourite with members and visitors alike. In the typical tradition of all 19th holes, you will hear the chatter of missed putts and the occasional hole in one.

Bar snacks are available for those looking for a light bite, while cooked food and sandwiches can be ordered from the kitchen for those looking for a heartier meal. We pride ourselves in offering a wide variety of quality drinks, including beers, wines, spirits, and soft drinks.

Danny Willett Lounge

Situated at the front of the clubhouse, the Danny Willett Lounge features large bay windows offering views of the course and our historic beech tree and is a favourite amongst our members.

This 64 square metre room which celebrates Danny's Masters win in 2016 is particularly popular with weekend golfers who can watch live golf on Sky TV, catch up on other sports, or simply relax with a coffee or drink from the bar in comfortable surroundings.

For more special dining events, the Danny Willett Lounge is the perfect place for our fine dining events such as our Bistro and Steak Night events as it is transformed into the perfect dining space.

Celebrate a Special Occasion

With its picturesque setting in Thrybergh Park and gorgeous views of the golf course out of the large arched windows, Thrybergh Hall is the perfect place for birthdays, christenings, anniversaries, engagement parties, baby showers, private Christmas parties and more.

A unique venue

Our Jack Hulley Suite is an ideal banquet or celebration venue, whatever the occasion. The contemporary décor, glittering chandelier and colour customisable ceiling lighting creates a relaxed yet sophisticated atmosphere where you can enjoy a range of cuisines and top quality hospitality.

For larger functions the large interconnecting doors into the adjacent 19th Bar can be opened up creating breakout space. Both rooms offer direct access to the outside patio. Alternatively, the Fullerton Room offers a more intimate space, perfect for buffets or more intimate private dining celebrations.

Rest assured that our highly experienced events team will meet all your needs with meticulous attention to detail and in a professional manner. Your outstanding cuisine will be prepared by our inhouse chefs to ensure your event is a truly memorable one.
